MESSAGE FROM MUSEUM DIRECTOR

Dear Members and Friends:

It is hard to believe that six months have already passed since we released the last issue of Members' Update! Much has happened during this time at the Museum, the most important of which was adding several new members to the team. The Museum is now fully staffed and we look forward to working together in taking this institution to new heights.

Since the beginning of the year, we opened five new exhibitions including a collaborative exhibit on Casas Grandes pottery at the El Paso Museum of History. To date, an estimated 15,000 people have viewed these exhibits combined. In June we will open An Ageless Craft: Historic and Modern Pueblo Pottery, one of the largest exhibits ever undertaken by the Museum, featuring over two hundred beautiful works of art from the Museum's permanent collection, El Paso Archaeological Society's collection, and items on loan from the private collection of Albert Alvidrez. An exhibit featuring Latin American mask traditions will open in September. Please see this publication for further details.

We were proud to host the Texas Archaeological Society's Rock Art Academy February 16-17, 2019, in partnership with the El Paso Archaeological Society, and Texas Parks and Wildlife - Hueco Tanks State Park. Eighty participants learned about the ancient rock art of the Jornada Mogollon region.

I served on the Host Committee for the Texas Association of Museums annual meeting held the first week of April here in El Paso. Many museum professionals from across the state and New Mexico attended, some visiting our City for the very first time. The Museum partnered with the National Border Patrol Museum to host a post-conference tour where we took guests out to Hueco Tanks State Park followed by private tours at both museums.

The 13th Annual Poppies Festival was held on Saturday, March 23. We were bedazzled with the largest bloom of Mexican Gold Poppies we have seen in the last several years. An estimated 4,000 people visited the festival!

We depend heavily on memberships to fund the cost of exhibitions, camps, classes, lectures and our other public programs. Your generosity makes a difference for which we are truly grateful.

Sincerely,

Jeff Romney
Director, El Paso Museum of Archaeology

MESSAGE FROM MCAD DIRECTOR

Dear Members:

Summer is nearly here and there is so much happening at EPMArch! Be sure to visit often to view a fantastic variety of permanent exhibitions and the new exhibitions, In the Language of Stone: The Rock Art of the Jornada Mogollon and Ancient Borderland: The Jornada Mogollon Region, both on view through September 14, 2019.

I am happy to announce that the El Paso Museum of Archaeology (EPMArch) will be open to the public until 9:00 PM on Thursday evenings during the months of June, July and August 2019. These extended hours align the Museum with the public hours offered by the other two museums in the department, allowing us to broaden our public outreach and enhance customer service.

EPMArch Summer Camps will be offered each week in June and are a great way for kids ages 7-12 years old to learn about archaeology and regional history through mock field surveys and excavations, films, and hands-on activities. Optional guided field trips to Hueco Tanks State Park to see ancient rock art will also be on offer. Our camps empower children to better understand what it is like to be an archaeologist studying the ancient peoples of the El Paso region.

The Museum is looking forward to offering additional vibrant programming in the months to come. Please enjoy learning more details about all the current and upcoming offerings at the Museum as you read this issue. As a Member of the El Paso Museum of Archaeology, your generous support empowers the Museum to continue to grow and strengthen our impact as a cultural and educational resource for our community and beyond.

I look forward to seeing you in the galleries and on the trails soon!

Warm regards,

Tracey Jerome, MS, MA

CURRENT EXHIBITIONS

The Salado Enigma: The Melding of Southwest Cultures

Through June 3, 2019

Tonto Polychrome bird effigy vessel. Salado Culture (AD 1250-1450)
Collection of Cochise College

The appearance of the Salado and their beautiful Redware Polychromes in the Southwest has been the subject of much research and debate since the earliest days of archaeological investigation in the region. This exhibit explores the Salado people, their possible origins, lifeways, and disappearance from the Salt and Gila River Basins in the Western New Mexico and Eastern Arizona Highlands. In addition, the exhibition features beautiful examples of Salado Polychromes, both from the Museum's own collection as well as objects on loan from Cochise College in Arizona.

In the Language of Stone: The Rock Art of the Jornada Mogollon

Through September 14, 2019

The Southern part of New Mexico, West Texas and North-Central Mexico is known by archaeologists as the Jornada Mogollon region. This area is rich in prehistoric rock art left behind by the ancient inhabitants of our region. This exhibition highlights petroglyphs and pictographs from iconic sites such as Hueco Tanks, Three Rivers and Otero Mesa, as well as lesser-known treasure troves through the camera lenses of rock art experts, students and amateur enthusiasts alike. This exhibit also includes 12 watercolor prints by Forrest Kirkland, which feature rock art at Hueco Tanks.

The people known by archaeologists as the Jornada Mogollon inhabited the Borderlands since Archaic times. Although there are few remains of this culture that are generally accessible to the general public, these people lived in several pueblos throughout the Hueco Basin, the area where the City of El Paso and Fort Bliss currently stand. This mini exhibition complements The Rock Art of the Jornada Mogollon exhibit by presenting general information about these enigmatic people as well as displaying a number of artifacts attributed to them from the collections of the El Paso Museum of Archaeology and the El Paso Archaeological Society.

From Fire and Earth:

Pottery Traditions of the Casas Grandes Medio Period

Through September 22, 2019 at the El Paso Museum of History

A partnership exhibition between the El Paso Museums of Archaeology, History and Art.

Pottery in the Southwest began as a utilitarian craft sometime between AD 200 - 400 among the Hohokam or Mogollon and gradually became an important art form. Pottery did not become widely useful in the Southwest until AD 500 - 700 when agriculture rose in prominence. Over the next 1,300 years, the Greater Southwest would become one of the richest and most diverse pottery producing regions in the world. Pottery, as perhaps no other medium, reflects the culture of its maker. Archaeologists use pottery as a major means in classifying peoples and cultures the world over.

The Casas Grandes Culture flourished during their Medio Period (AD 1200 - 1450) in the northwest corner of modern-day Chihuahua, Mexico. Like many of their contemporaries in the Southwest, the Casas Grandes people would become prolific potters producing some of the finest pottery of the Pre-Columbian world. Human and animal effigy vessels, horned/plumed serpent and macaw motifs and elaborate painted designs would become commonplace on some polychromes. The earlier Mimbres people of the Classic Period (AD 1000 - 1150) and other Mesoamerican cultures further to the southwest influenced Casas Grandes pottery designs. The Salado Culture (AD 1275 - 1450) of southeast Arizona would also exert some influence on Casas Grandes styles in the late 1300's. Nearly two dozen Casas Grandes pottery types are recognized including eight polychromes, two bichromes and many other plainwares and variants.

Trade and prosperity reached a high point across the Southwest, but the good times did not last. Perhaps due to drought, war, disease, over population, depletion of resources and other factors, populations dropped. Mass migrations occurred and entire regions were abandoned. By AD 1450 the Ancestral Puebloan, Hohokam, Mogollon (Mimbres, Salado, and Casas Grandes) cultures dispersed, and the Pueblos we know today took shape. Pottery traditions across the Greater Southwest also saw a decline, with some types disappearing completely.

In the mid 1970's, Juan Quezada and others from Mata Ortiz, Chihuahua, Mexico launched a new era in Casas Grandes pottery. Inspired by the sherds and other artifacts that they found in this region, they began making pottery using only natural elements. This ceramic revival has spurred national and international interest in the Casas Grandes region over the past few decades, as well as rekindled in the local population an appreciation for tradition and their cultural heritage. Mata Ortiz pottery is recognized as some of the finest hand crafted ceramics produced in the world today.

This exhibition features many examples of Casas Grandes and Mata Ortiz ceramics from the permanent collections of the El Paso Museum of Archaeology and the El Paso Museum of Art.

UPCOMING EXHIBITIONS

An Ageless Craft: Historic and Modern Pueblo Pottery

June 8, 2019 - January 11, 2020

For hundreds of years the peoples of the Rio Grande Valley made breathtaking pottery that was used for domestic as well as ceremonial purposes. Through the passage of time, generations of masters have continued to practice their arts, continuing to create stunning pieces that have merged centuries of traditions with modern artistic sensibilities. Although they are geographically close together and share many cultural similarities, each pueblo has developed its own style that is unique to them.

An Ageless Craft will display the work of potters from most of the Rio Grande and Western Pueblos including Maria Martinez of San Ildefonso, the Nampeyo family of First Mesa (Hopi), and Albert Alvidrez of Ysleta del Sur. This is a not to miss opportunity to experience the continuation of age-old pueblo traditions through over two hundred beautiful works of art from the Museum's permanent collection, El Paso Archaeological Society's collection, and items on loan from the private collection of Albert Alvidrez.

Enchanted Faces: Latin American Mask Traditions

September 21, 2019 - February 8, 2020

Collection of George Maloof and Elieth Salazar-Alpizar

The use of masks is a very ancient human practice that dates back thousands of years. Evidence of mask use in Latin America predates the arrival of Europeans with examples having been identified in Mesoamerica as well as in the Andes and North America. Following European conquest and the repression of the native cultures, Pre-Columbian traditions began to merge with Christian rituals, a process that made the use of masks much more commonplace. Today from Mexico's Día de los Muertos to Costa Rica's giant Mascaradas, masks play a role in many festivals, both sacred and secular, throughout Latin America.

Join us in an exploration of Latin American Masks and how they are used throughout the continent.

OTHER NEWS

Extended Summer Hours of Operation

EPMArch will be open until 9:00 PM on THURSDAY evenings during the months of June, July and August 2019. These extended hours will put the Museum more in line with the public hours observed by the other two museums in the department, allowing us to broaden our public outreach and enhance customer service. Bring the whole family or a group of friends and explore 14,000 years of regional prehistory! Admission is free.

New Collections Storage Room Completed

The Museum is happy to announce that the installation of the new collections storage room is now complete. This project was part of the Quality of Life Bond funded construction of improvements undertaken last fall. Much of the Museum's ceramic collection is now stored in the room which used to be the Administrative Office.

Student Internships

Alare Slack is a student of Anthropology at the University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP). The Museum accepted Ms. Slack into its internship program as a collaboration with the Museum Studies course offered by the university. From January to May 2019, Alare spent 8 hours a week at EPMArch assisting the curator by entering information into the Museum's collections management database. She was also instrumental in transferring collections into the new collections storage room. Alare commented that she enjoyed examining the complexities of Pre-Columbian pottery during her internship and noted that "there is more to them than art and function."

Ms. Slack plans to graduate from UTEP with a Bachelor's degree in Anthropology a year from now. She then hopes to pursue further studies with an emphasis in museum work.

For student internship opportunities please contact George Maloof at (915) 212-3272.
